Hello –

As team is working through and using the database got some feedback. Based on your responses I can log these in QC log too for tracking.

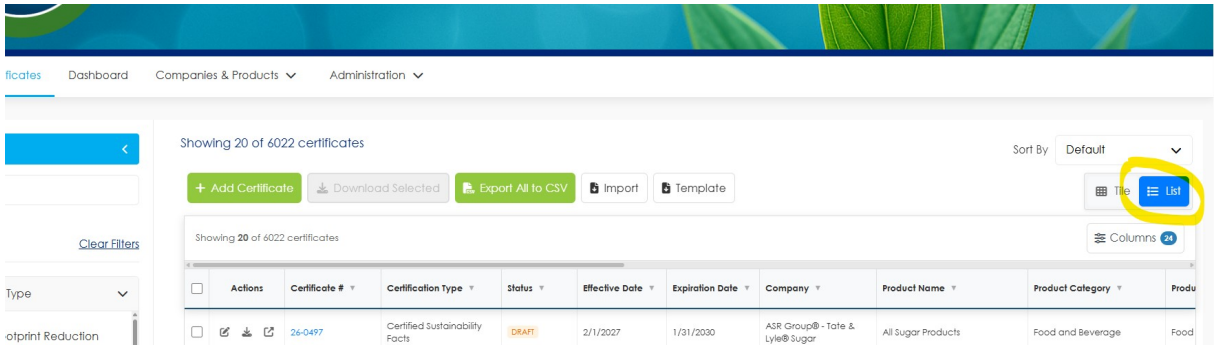

Optimizations

- Is it an easy fix (with low risk of breaking things) to have the Edit button open a new tab in these views (similar to how Preview does). The team is finding it inefficient by losing their prior search when editing a bunch of certs so I felt this was the best lowest risk fix

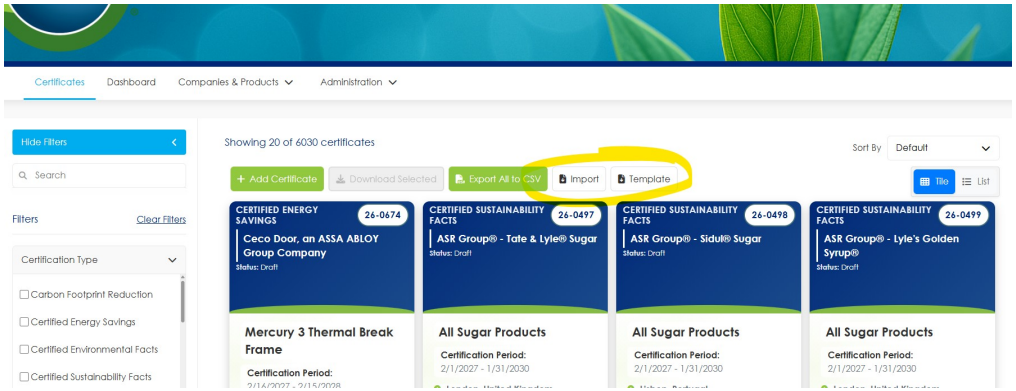

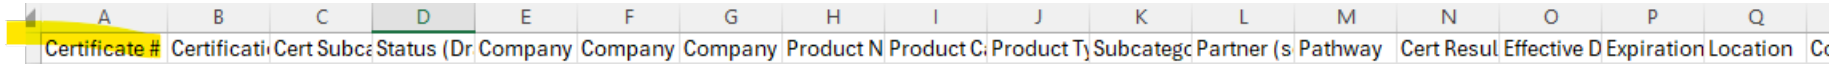

- Is it an easy fix (with low risk of breaking things) to have the List view the default for all logged in users. The team will really only use this when they are working and they find it inefficient to have to toggle each time the page loads

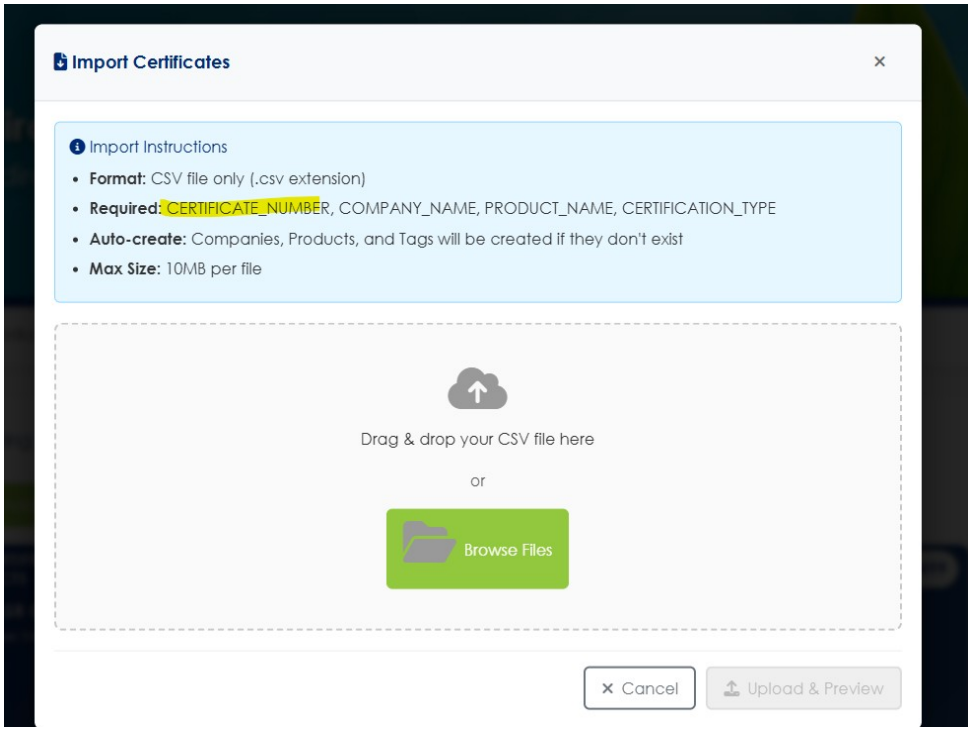

Certificate Template/Import Questions

- Right now when you download the template to add certificate listings. The template has a Certificate # column. When left blank it assigns a number, which is right. Is the column there in the case you want to make an edit to a current one in which case you would include the number of cert you are editing?

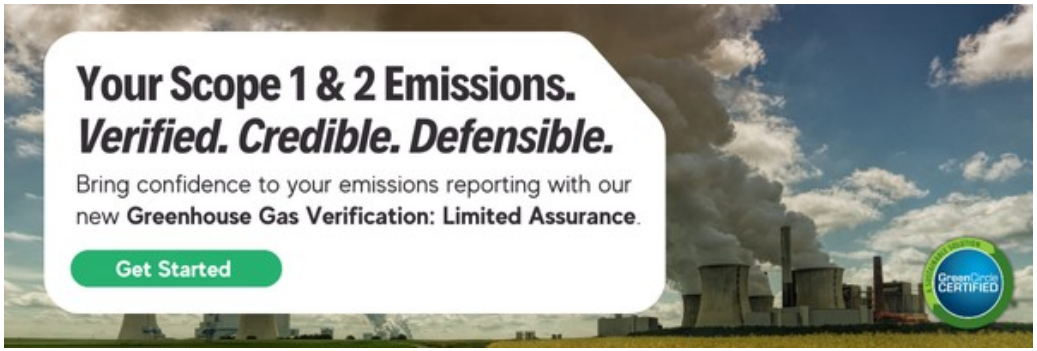

- I think we need to update the below text to be more detailed in the above cases since right now its saying Cert Number is required when its not when adding NEW entries

- Since data is real and we are using DB I didn't want to do too much testing myself on this but it will be feature team uses

Thanks,
Carly
